There are many types of CATs and other competitive exams that require a lot of reading. There are just not enough hours in the day to devote to only reading. We will attempt to break down the problem in two stages. Our first stage will be to make a detailed list of the subjects that you need to read for your exam, and then we will work on how to get to the right level of reading ability. A lot of books can be bought for the price of a cup of coffee. You don't have to spend a lot of money to get the right kind of material for your exam. The whole point is to not spend too much on a book that will give you an advantage. We will first look at the types of books that you should buy. Then we will look at how to buy books that will give you an advantage. After that we will get to the important point - how to choose the right level of reading ability. You need to know the questions that you are likely to encounter. The answers are of two types - standard and uncommon. Standard answers are the ones that you find everywhere. Uncommon answers are not easily found outside of the exam book. These uncommon answers are ones that you need to read for this particular test. Therefore, it is important to choose the right level of reading ability. To this end, we will provide some ideas on how to get started. How to Choose the Right Reading Ability You need to make a decision based on the level of questions in the CAT/mock-exam. For example, if there are only ten questions in a paper, you would need to be able to read books that are suitable to the level of the questions. In the case of a multiple-choice test, you could choose a book that is exactly appropriate to the level of the questions. In the case of the TOEFL, this might mean choosing an easy book. In the case of the CAT, you would need to choose a book that is appropriate to the level of the questions, but not so easy that you are at the risk of just reading for the test. Therefore, when choosing books, you need to consider the questions in the test paper, and make a decision on the right level of reading ability. There is one more reason to choose books that are suitable to the level of questions. You will not be allowed to carry a book with you on the exam day. You will have to read from your book after 82157476af
